In a Tweet thread posted on February 16th, author and journalist Nick Corbishley alerted the world to a “very dark” experiment that’s underway right now in Nigeria.

Here’s what he said:

Nick Corbishley

A very dark experiment is under way in Nigeria, with deadly consequences. Since October 2021, 99.5% of Nigerians have refused to use the central bank's digital currency, the so-called e-Naira, preferring to continue using cash. So what did the central bank do? It doubled down.

What ghastly thing did the central bank do exactly? Nick explains:

Nick Corbishley
@NickCorbishley · Follow

Replying to @NickCorbishley

In December, the central bank decided to replace all high-denomination cash bills in the economy, just as India did in its disastrous demonetisation campaign of 2016. The goal is to make it much more difficult for Nigerians to use cash. And it's working like a dream/nightmare.

Now, apparently, there's a massive cash shortage looming:

As I've been warning for last two months, Nigeria's already weakened economy is in no position to absorb the resulting economic shock. The central bank is not printing nearly enough cash to replenish the money supply. The result is a massive cash shortage.

People are going to DIE as the vibrant and organic cash economy sputters to a halt, just like as happened in India:

As in India, people will die. Businesses are closing. Some will never reopen. Nigerians' lives have been plunged into chaos. But the country's government and central bank say the pain is worth it. From my latest article on the topic (nakedcapitalism.com/2023/02/this-w...)...

The whole point is to starve and crush the people until they submit to a digital currency scheme:

Nick Corbishley
@NickCorbishley · Follow

Replying to @NickCorbishley

Godwin Emezie, the CBN governor, has hailed the experiment as a success, as 80% of the cash previously held in private is now deposited with financial institutions. Finance Minister Zainab Ahmed concurred, saying: "The only sore point is the pain it has caused to citizens."

And don't be naïve. All of this is coming our way, and sooner than you think:

Why should the rest of the world care? Because unless stopped in its tracks, this monetary experiment is coming to all of us, one way or another. According to the Atlantic Council's CBDC tracker, 114 countries, representing over 95 percent of global GDP, are exploring a CBDC.

The whole point is to use poor third-worlders as lab rats in an experiment so they can bring it to the civilized West. What they are doing to the poor people of Nigeria is just a test-run for what they want to do to you.

We need to pay attention to this dire situation, because as Nick correctly stated, the digital currency way of life is coming for us all. First, they put in place the system that will track all of our movements, conversations and transactions. Then the real fun and games begin for these twisted, evil mad scientists...

Fools and feds always assume the first resort must be to go to war.

What if instead we watched this experiment as well and learned?

I've already spotted several weaknesses. And I can tell you it is not going to work.

When you already have the whole of talk radio against it?

And they have already lost the people.

the problem is that it is not going to work, we already know that. But communism has always not worked. After 106 years of failure, at the top and the useful idiots at the bottom, keep trying it.

I went out to my history professor and asked her how she felt about the wall falling, communism's failure. I asked her how she felt as a communist knowing it was a failure. How can she and her fellow communists make it work when the rest of the world knows that communism failed, I also asked her how she felt about that they cheated trying to make it work. Her reply... We (communists, socialists, and communists) are smarter than they are. When I dropped out of school and never looked back. I realized that I was in a house of fools and had nothing to teach me only to hate me.

Probably telling you something you already know, but Communism is a failure. In fact with Religions, to the extent the more evidence that their precepts are false, the more their adherents cling to it.

It's time to switch to Privacy cryptocurrencies so governments, banks, and other extortionists don't know what money you have or what you've been buying. They can't take what they don't know you have. That's how you solve their thieving and extortion.

The only cryptos that actually maintain privacy are Monero, Dero, and especially Pirate Chain. Pirate Chain is perfect money. Get a little of each, just in case. It may end up being the only money you have left after you get extorted by your politicians aka government

If you're going to inject your infinite wisdom into discussions, maybe first give thought to learning how to write a complete sentence.

"When you already have the whole of talk radio against it?" is NOT one.

Not that war should always be a first option, but there are times when it's the ONLY option. If the American colonists hadn't "gone to war", we might not even have a country today. The same is true of America's patriots after Pearl Harbor.

The problem now, unfortunately, is that our population has become so enamored with itself in all its glory in "social media", and everyone including our military are so preoccupied with using the correct "pronouns", that the country might not even be capable of "going to war" anymore. The dirty little secret is that America has become "low-hanging fruit" for our ruthless and opportunistic enemies.

Let that sink in before you criticize those of us who understand that there comes a point where "enough is enough", and simply "watching" to see what happens next is a really bad idea.

Nigeria as explained just destroyed the inventory of available cash, reducing the numbers, making the largest bills illegal and worthless, unless turned in for credits by date-certain. The next morning... poof... they are worthless.

We Americans need to turn away from debit card use because of its convenience, to using cash because of its importance to freedom. The mere uptick in use is noticed by business and banks. The more it is used, the less excuse the government will have to take cash away.

Digital currency is slavery. Cash is Freedom

We have been well trained, chipped and pinned, cash is dirty, bad for you, the muggers and hodlums can take your cash - see how street crime is rampant and encouraged through non enforcement? All the while as we weakly demand change we march along like lemmings to the cliff.

As true as that is, the only way to keep from going over to a digital system is the continued use of cash, by everyone.

The only way to combat this NWO agenda for a cashless society is to establish a trade and barter system, these digital currencies are only tracking systems for the political elite to keep you under control. Bypass their digital money and eliminate the elitist and their agenda, it has been done before and will be done again. Absolute power absolutely corrupts.

Bartering and selling without notifying the overseer will be a criminal offense against the state. Long term loans equivalent to laundering, justifying every thing you have that you do not have a record for when the sheriff pays a visit, will be grounds for confiscation and incarceration, seizing of all other worldly goods until their ownership can be determined.....

I think the Nigerians will soon figure out that the answer is to develop new and local currencies. A bartering system most likely.

Forcing something like this on first world citizens, particularly Americans, would be extremely difficult. There are already too many alternative currencies available.

After the covid debacle and the trust and goodwill lost by western governments it will also be far more difficult to deny basic freedoms.
