Commerce Secretary Gina Raimondo: "We have to be in this today, tomorrow, two years, three years... we're in this for the long run." Including "reconstruction," which will be "a decade in the making." But thankfully, she says, this effort will be a "public-private partnership"

Blackrock "senior advisor" says while it's a big challenge, he's optimistic about enabling Ukraine's ability to "Build Back Better"

Deputy Governor of the National Bank of Ukraine tells US Chamber of Commerce rep that Ukraine is ready to "Build Back Better" to create a business environment that is "friendly to private investment"

Head of an obscure US government agency called the International Development Finance Corporation vows to continue "unlocking private finance" in Ukraine, including by providing insurance to US firms whose investments could be subject to "expropriation" or "political violence"

IBM executive expresses hope that "Building Back Better" would mean more opportunities to sell to "privately-owned banks," including big American banks, rather than just government entities, which had been most of IBM's clientele in Ukraine before the war
