MATT WALSH'S PRODUCER GETS APPROVED FOR TESTICLE REMOVAL IN A 22-MINUTE VIDEO CALL

PUBLISHED: JUNE 07, 2023 | BY CASSANDRA MACDONALD \(/AUTHOR/EXECUTIVE_EDITOR\)

ONE OF THE LARGEST “TRANSGENDER HEALTHCARE” PROVIDERS IN THE U.S. APPROVED MATT WALSH’S PRODUCER FOR TESTICLE REMOVAL IN A 22-MINUTE VIDEO CALL.

The Daily Wire producer, Gregg Re, told the healthcare provider that he had dysphoria in the past — but did not currently. They diagnosed him with the disorder anyway to ensure that insurance would cover the procedure.

📖 1/ BREAKING: The largest “trans healthcare” providers in the U.S. are rubber-stamping letters approving gruesome, life-altering surgeries. It’s such a racket that my producer was approved for testicle removal in #22minutes. The tape is disturbing.

2/ First, some background. Ari Groner is a licensed clinical social worker who educates doctors on “trans healthcare.” At a recent training session for the Juniper Center, Groner explained that she writes whatever letters her patients want, because she’s not a “gatekeeper.”

A screenshot of a Twitter post by Matt Walsh. The post is dated June 7, 2023, and is a reply to @MattWalshBlog. The text of the tweet discusses medical standards for trans patients, specifically mentioning the WPATH standards and a 'persuasive essay' requirement. A video player is embedded in the tweet, but it is currently blank with the text 'Watch on Twitter' in the top right corner. The user's name 'Matt Walsh' and handle '@MattWalshBlog' are visible at the top and bottom of the tweet.

Re made an appointment with the most prominent trans healthcare provider in the U.S., Plume Clinic, which provides these letters for a $150 fee.

6/ Folx, which provides letters authorizing surgeries for a nominal fee, goes on to admit that “it’s quite possible” patients will receive a letter indicating a gender dysphoria diagnosis, even though they “really do not have dysphoria.”

7/ We reached out to Folx about this. A staff member confirmed that a "diagnosis" of gender dysphoria -- with the word "diagnosis" in scare quotes -- is a “requirement” for insurance purposes, even if it “doesn’t apply.”

“In his intake form with Plume, Gregg provided a fake legal name. He said he had dysphoria in the past. But he stated he had ~~never~~ experienced it for six months or more. Under the current version of the DSM-5, that means he doesn't have gender dysphoria,” Walsh wrote in a Twitter thread. “Plume quickly scheduled Gregg for a video interview anyway. He assumed the identity ‘Chelsea Bussey.’ He didn't even attempt to pass. He badly mispronounced the name of the surgery he wanted. He made it clear he didn't know what effect the surgery would have.”

8/ The largest trans healthcare provider in the U.S., @plume_clinic, runs a similar scam. They sell letters for $150 authorizing surgeries. That's how our producer @gregg_re received approval for testicle removal after a 22-minute video call.

“Nevertheless, Plume’s nurse practitioner said she wanted to write the most ‘solid’ letter possible to justify surgery. Gregg tells her that he once wrote an essay in school about being a woman, which everyone thought was “ridiculous.” Walsh’s thread continued. “Gregg also tells Plume’s nurse practitioner that his father has been prescribing him hormones for years. The nurse doesn’t question this in any way. Instead, she says that arrangement is ‘perfect.’”

After a three-day wait, the letter arrived saying “Chelsea Bussey” was experiencing “significant, ongoing gender dysphoria” and strongly recommended testicle removal.

14/ The letter keeps capitalizing "Orchiectomy," without "an" before it, as if it's just been copy-pasted into a template. Gregg followed up to learn why he had been diagnosed with gender dysphoria. Plume admitted they just use letter templates provided by WPATH.

"This scam is the cutting-edge of 'trans healthcare.' After launching just a couple of years ago, Plume now operates in 41 states. Folx is in 47 states. How is it possible they've expanded so quickly?" Walsh wrote. "The answer is that there's big money behind this. Plume and Folx raised more than $45 million last year."

Walsh also tagged insurance companies, asking if they know they're paying for surgeries based on "obviously false information?"

19/ Some states have restricted this kind of 'medicine.' Florida, for example, recently passed a law banning most trans telehealth services. Trans activists (and the Associated Press @AP) have complained that this law is 'onerous.'

20/ They're furious because they know the "gender transition" industry is corrupt and fraudulent from the ground up. Protecting kids is just one piece of the puzzle. The fight begins there, but it doesn't end there. The whole industry needs to be shut down.

Cutting off body parts to treat problems in the brain.
OK.
I guess that makes a lot of sense...
Surgery for mental illness- it's the new chic!

No, it's not a brain problem, it's a heart problem, it's a depths of soul problem. People miss God and are trying to fill the void in their hearts and souls.
