

Jab math for children: Vaccinate almost 38,000 kids (with hundreds of serious side effects), stop one Covid hospitalization

You read that right. 38,000 to 1, per a new British study. At best. Not counting side effects. Yet the Centers for Disease Control is STILL pushing these on kids.

ALEX BERENSON

FEB 2, 2024

611

82

30

Share

To stop one severe Covid case in children aged 5-15, about 38,000 kids would need to be dosed with mRNA Covid jabs, British researchers have found.

The report should be the final death knell for efforts to give young people mRNA shots, which the United States still has not stopped. Ignoring any other side effects, vaccine-caused myocarditis in kids and teens alone outweighs any potential benefit.

For people aged 16-74, the results were hardly better. The jabs were only about 30 percent effective against hospitalization or death (not infection). And about 15,000 adults would have needed to be “fully vaccinated” to avoid one “severe case.”

The findings come from a huge study of Covid hospitalizations and deaths in Britain in summer 2022. The Lancet, a top medical journal, published the study last month.

The researchers, who are pro-jab, reported their findings in an unusual way, probably to try to hide how ineffective the shots were in people under 75. But upon close inspection, the paper reveals the truth.

—
(Help me check their math - and double-check their lies. For 20 cents a day.)

info@freedomdefenseresourcecenter

Subscribe

---

The study's bonafides can't be questioned - even if how it presents its findings can be.

Health Data Research UK, an independent charity group that is "the UK's national institute for health data science," funded it.

Researchers matched vaccination, hospitalization, and death records for nearly everyone 5 and over from England, Northern Ireland, Scotland, and Wales - almost 70 million people in all, including over 9 million children aged 5-15.

---

(Elmo, can you help me spell myocarditis? M-Y-O-C...)

Donate

Video

Elmo Gets the Covid-19 Vaccine

The researchers then compared “severe cases” of Covid in “fully vaccinated” and “undervaccinated” kids and adults from June through September 2022. Essentially, any adult under 75 who had not received three Covid jabs before the study began was called undervaccinated. (For kids, the rules were slightly trickier.)

After adjusting for risk factors, the researchers claimed “undervaccination” had led to about 200 extra hospitalizations over the summer of 2022 in kids 5-15.

(Technically, the definition of “severe case” included death. But child deaths from Covid in Britain are vanishingly rare. Fewer than 100 occurred during the entire first three years of Covid, according to this British government report. So the severe cases in children were essentially all hospitalizations.)

In other words, if every child in Britain had been fully vaccinated in summer 2022, the United Kingdom would have had about 480 Covid hospitalizations - instead of the roughly 680 it actually had.

But in summer 2022, only 20 percent of kids 5-15 in the United Kingdom were “fully vaccinated.” The other 80 percent, 7.5 million children in all, were not. (Europeans were much more reluctant to give their kids Covid jabs than were Americans, despite the endless media complaints about “anti-vaxxers” in the United States).

Thus to avoid those 200 Covid hospitalizations in children - not deaths or intensive care stays, but hospitalizations - 7.5 million kids would need to be jabbed.

—

(Back in 2021, Centers for Disease Control director Dr. Mandy Cohen proudly reported she jabbed her kids with a useless and potentially dangerous dose of mRNA. She hoped you would too!)

NC Health and Human Services Sec. Mandy Cohen, shown here with her two daughters aged 7 and 9, is encouraging other parents of elementary school-aged children to get their kids vaccinated. Screenshot from NC DHHS public service announcement

—

The researchers performed a similar calculation for adults 16-74, and found that “full” vaccination would have stopped about 1,500 extra hospitalizations and deaths in them from June to September 2022.

But at the time almost half the adults in Britain - about 21 million people aged 16-74 - were “undervaccinated.”

Twenty-one million divided by 1,500 equals 14,000, so what the paper really says is that about 14,000 people under 75 would have needed at least one extra mRNA shot to prevent one Covid hospitalization or death.

—

Finally, the researchers ran the same calculation for adults 75 and over - who are, of course, at far higher risk from Covid.

In that group, they found a very different result. Even though most of the elderly were already “fully vaccinated,” about 1.8 million were not.

Vaccinating them would have stopped about 5,400 hospitalizations or deaths, they reported. In other words, instead of needing tens of thousands of “full vaccinations” to prevent a severe Covid case, only 330 were required for people over 75.

(The truth is even more complex, because that figure ignores the factor of “healthy vaccinee bias” in the ultra-elderly. Some very old people will not be jabbed because they are within weeks or months of death and so are unlikely to benefit from a shot in any case. But if they die of Covid, they are counted as unvaccinated Covid deaths.)

Still, the finding confirms what nearly everyone who doesn't work for the CDC already knows - in the Omicron era, the only people who have even a theoretical possibility of benefitting from the shots are the very old.

And for kids, they are all downside.

38,000-to-1 downside.

611 Likes · 30 Restacks

82 Comments

Write a comment...

Tina C Tina's Newsletter Feb 2

Big Pharma had bought and paid for the CDC and their vax mandates! Does anyone realize that our poor America babies get SEVENTY, yes you read that right, SEVENTY vaccine jabs by the time they're 3! Try getting into school without them! And these damn politicians allow this!

♡ LIKE (78)    💬 REPLY    ↗ SHARE    ...

4 replies

reality speaks Feb 2

The universal use of Ivermectin would had eliminated almost all of those hospitalizations and deaths in the children. Going from 680 to zero. So who would do this???? Destroy the reputation of a safe and effective treatment to push a deadly toxic shot that is ineffective and then lie about those that are killed or harmed IE teen age boys and girls have always died in their sleep or drop dead on the stage or court all the time. This wasn't about money it's much much worse. There is a evil force that is intent on killing you and your family. Do not comply.

♡ LIKE (58)    💬 REPLY    ↗ SHARE    ...

14 replies

80 more comments...